The purple line and green line show the change of the percentage of noise pixels retained among thresholded data over different SSNR and SIN respectively

When SIN>1, the proportion of retained noise pixels increases, which is abnormal.